Prepared by Barry Richards, Stacy Newton

Wireframes and diagrams in these formats do not suggest specific directions for visual design or finalized copy. They indicate preferred element and pattern hierarchy within the context of a page, and as a result, suggest directions for information design. It is important to consider that the hierarchy of the patterns and elements in the page only suggest information structure, element functionality, element relationships and not discrete locations on pages.

- Notes:
- A Clicking the Back to Search Results link will direct users back to the map with the results table displayed. Conditional depending on if the user came from a results page.
 - B User is able to switch direction types (ex. Driving, Walking, Transit).

If the user selects the Transit option, display the following fields:

Depart At

Depart At field options: Depart At, Arrive At. Default to Depart At

Date defaults to current date. Click calendar icon to choose a different date.

Time field defaults to current time. Within current hour, display 15 minute intervals. Otherwise, display half-hour intervals.

 - C More Options only displays when driving directions are displayed (which is the default). Expanding More Options displays advanced options for driving directions. Examples shown below.

☐ More Options

☒ Avoid Highways ☐ Avoid Tolls ☒ Miles ☐ Km
 - D View Directions call to action displays map with route highlighted and step-by-step driving directions.
 - E Send Address To Email spawns PCM.MAP.COM++SendTo#Email modal. Send Address to Text spawns PCM.MAP.COM++SendTo#Text modal.
 - F Control to reverse directions.
 - G Search box where user can enter location information. If there are recent searches available, present a drop-down. Clicking the drop-down provides a list of recent searches. See PCM.MAP.COM.SharedElements for expanded drop-down.
